

Welcome to our new associate editor

Dr. Felipe Aluja Jaramillo has recently joined the management group of the Revista Colombiana de Radiología as Associate Editor.

Until now, this function was performed with great enthusiasm by Dr. Felipe Uriza Carrasco, who contributed in the policies and execution of the editorial work. To Dr. Uriza, our thanks for this great work for more than 20 years.

Dr. Felipe Aluja Jaramillo is a Colombian physician from the Universidad del Rosario and a radiologist graduated from the Sanitas organization. In his academic background, I would like to highlight his master's degree and specialization in Health Sciences Education and his training as an academic peer. He was already part of our group of academic peers where he contributed very judiciously with his article review tasks.

He is a professor at the Universidad Javeriana, not only in Medicine and Diagnostic Imaging, but also in the area of education.

He is currently a member of the Board of Directors of the Bogota section of the Asociación Colombiana de Radiología.

In international associations, he is a member of the Latin American committee of the Radiological Society of North America (RSNA) and is a professor in the teleconferencing program at Lousiana State University.

In his academic life he has shown his interest in publications and is the author of a large number of articles in national and international journals; he has participated as a lecturer in important academic events in radiology both in Colombia and abroad.

For me and for the entire editorial group, having Dr. Felipe Aluja as its new Associate Editor is good news that I would like to share with our readers today.
